The fundamentals of steel distribution remain challenging

- Generally not bound to any supplier because of the generic nature, especially of commodity steel (low switching costs)
- Often under price pressure, especially where steel is making up a major part of their costs

- Steel distribution markets remain fragmented
- Competition mainly on price and availability
- Mill-backed distributors in Europe have a market share strategy in order to utilize assets instead of focusing on profitability

- Global steel demand is expected to grow slowly going forward
- Overcapacity in the steel industry spread across the world, but most pronounced in China, is likely to stay for the foreseeable future
02 What are the shortcomings of the steel and metal distribution business?

| Supply chain | Current steel distribution supply chain is linear: suppliers produce steel and distributors process and deliver material to downstream manufacturers. Orders mostly made by phone, fax and email with many manual steps required to process an order | Long delivery times, incorrect deliveries and high inventory levels |
| Transparency | Flow of information is interrupted several times. Thus there are no effective information and data on inventory and lead times available which makes the entire supply chain highly intransparent | Steel is unnecessarily shipped around and suppliers, distributors and manufacturers need to stock material to balance out the non-transparency of demand, supply and prices |
| Steel prices | Steel industry suffers furthermore from overcapacities on the production but also on the distribution level. This leads in combination with changing trade-measures to very volatile prices | Most distributors making profits when prices moving up and making losses when prices heading down |
| Margins | Besides volatile prices, margins especially for commodity steel products are generally low due to high overcapacities at all levels. Hence, almost all competitors want to expand their higher value-added business | Prices for higher value-added business coming increasingly under pressure as well |
